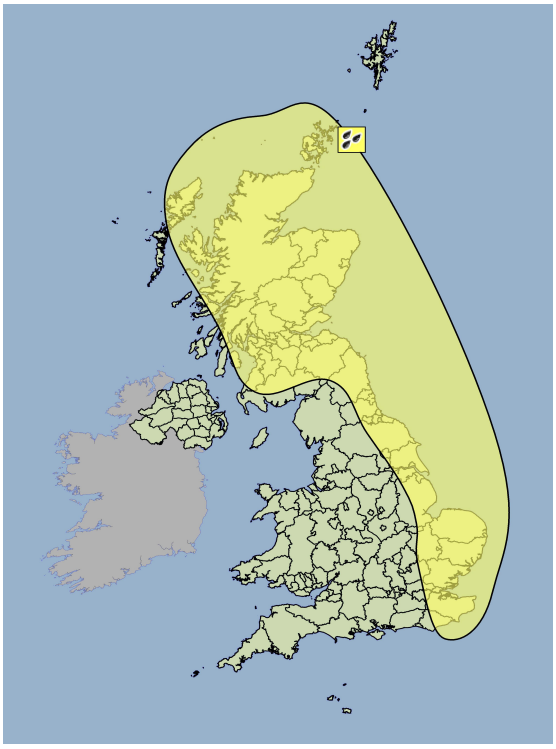
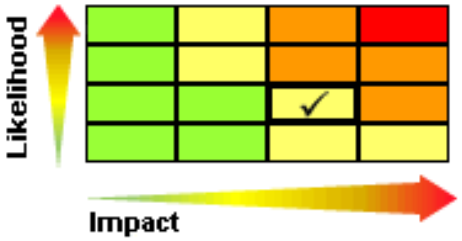
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Further heavy showers and thunderstorms will affect the far east of the UK into Wednesday, with a risk of 20-40 mm of rain falling within a few hours in places. Most of the showers and thunderstorms will clear to the east fairly quickly in the morning, but isolated heavy showers and thunderstorms may develop across southern and western Scotland, and northeast England later in the day.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:05 on Wed, 24th Jul 2013 until 21:00 on Wed, 24th Jul 2013

Further thundery downpours are likely across more eastern parts of England and the northeastern half of Scotland at first on Wednesday, although these should clear from the west during the early morning in England, but hang on into the early afternoon across the far northeast of Scotland. There is also a risk of further heavy showers developing over parts of Scotland and northeast England during the afternoon.

The public should be aware of the risk of localised disruption to travel due to surface water flooding.
